ALL ABOUT . . .

This Pilipino-English Dictionary is a major contribution to communication arts. Undoubtedly, it will be an invaluable help to everyone to achieve a precise and effective vocabulary. Skillfully organized, substantially written and extensive in coverage, it is an answer to this era of bilingualism. Indeed, it is an outstanding guide users of language will find hard without – a rarity in its field and a truly consummate labor of love.

Mr. Vito C. Santos has accomplished a highly taxing but very exciting task – the composition of this dictionary. The publication of this work of scholarship is a testimony of the author's qualification as a Lexicographer. His Pilipino-English Dictionary is a distinct contribution to the healthy development of the Pilipino language.

A WORD FROM THE PUBLISHER

The publication of the FIRST VICASSAN'S PILIPINO-ENGLISH DICTIONARY introduces a new venture in the art of Pilipino lexicography. For this, the National Book Store takes pride in having taken part as Publisher of this significant and towering contribution in the field of dictionary making in the Philippines. This dictionary contains more entries than any comparable Pilipino-English dictionary to date. The broad vocabulary coverage and the innovations, like the arrangement of entries in a single alphabetical list, the division into syllables of all the entries, the indication of accents and stresses, and the partial inclusion of etymologies, synonyms, antonyms, and comparisons, and the simple but clear definitions, make this dictionary ideal for the use of students, teachers, writers, translators, researchers, and others interested in knowing the wealth of Pilipino, the national language of the Philippines.

It is with pride and great pleasure, therefore, to introduce to our patrons the FIRST VICASSAN'S PILIPINO-ENGLISH DICTIONARY as our initial venture in the publication of original, bigger and much improved Pilipino dictionaries. This is a commitment we promise to accomplish for and in behalf of our countrymen and in the interest of good lexicography.

DEDICATION

To the memory of the late Lope K. Santos, author of the Pilipino National Language Grammar (Balarilà ng Wikang Pambansá), for his outstanding contribution in the development of Pilipino, and to the present and future generations of Filipinos, this work is humbly dedicated, hoping that the latter would continue to study more and learn better ways of enriching and propagating our National Language.

FOREWORD

Bilingual dictionaries and vocabularies in English and Tagalog or Pilipino have been published, and the present work, A Pilipino-English Dictionary, is the latest prepared by Mr. Vito C. Santos, a former researcher-translator in the Institute of National Language.

Mr. Santos is not new in this kind of work. His column, Ingles sa Kahulugang Pilipino, in the defunct PHILIPPINES FREE PRESS (Sa Wikang Pilipino) speaks well for himself. His contribution as principal assistant in the preparation of an English-Tagalog Dictionary authored by an Australian Redemptorist Father, though not known to many, could well be a gauge in the evaluation of his present work.

Going over Mr. Santos' work, I find much improvement in the presentation and simplification of meanings as compared to the rest. The compiler has learned to present his material for easy and ready use both by Filipinos and foreigners.

Although I believe that dictionary preparation is best done by a team of researchers, grammarians, stylists and other scholars, as is being laboriously practiced in our Office, still it makes one wonder how a man alone can cope with such voluminous work. And so we cannot help but admire Mr. Santos for accomplishing a work of this magnitude.

Finally, a dictionary of this kind is always useful for both learners and speakers of English and Pilipino.

INTRODUCTION

TEODORO A. AGONCILLO
University Professor
University of the Philippines

Today, as one walks the main streets of downtown Manila, one finds bundles of pocket dictionaries in Pilipino being paraded around by ambulant peddlers or else lying idly on shallow baskets along with other reading materials not exactly comforting either to the eyes or to the mind. A cursory glance at those "dictionaries" reveals their superficiality, and one begins to suspect that they were hurriedly printed in order to "catch" the opening of classes. Those "dictionaries" are nothing but poor abbreviations of the old dictionaries prepared by the Spanish missionaries and by Pedro Serrano Laktaw whose Diccionario Tagalog-Hispano (1914) was the best until recent years. But those "dictionaries" have served their purpose; the novices in the language, particularly students required to take several units of Pilipino in the schools and colleges, were able to breeze through their assignments with ease, thanks to the "dictionaries" of the streets. To those, however, who would like to learn the language and its nuances, those "dictionaries" are better left on the shallow baskets under the glare of the tropical sun.

The first dictionary of any of the Philippine languages published in the Philippines was prepared by Fr. Pedro de San Buenaventura, a Franciscan friar whose Vocabulario de Lengua Tagala was published in Pila, Laguna, in 1613. Contemporaneous with this work was another dictionary by a Dominican friar, Fr. Francisco de San Jose, popularly known as Blancas de San Jose, whose work, Vocabulario de la Lengua Tagala, remains in manuscript form and now lies in the vault of the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris. Why this work was not published by the friar when his religious order had a printing press in San Gabriel (now a part of Binondo) is difficult to ascertain. It may be surmised that when Fr. Pedro de San Buenaventura's Vocabulario appeared in 1613, Blancas de San Jose, realizing the superiority of the Franciscan's work to his manuscript dictionary, was discouraged from publishing his own work. This speculation is based on my comparison of the two dictionaries: San Buenaventura's work is definitely superior to that of San Jose, of which I have a photographic copy.

Almost a century later, or in 1703, Fr. Domingo de los Santos, another Franciscan, published his Vocabulario de la Lengua Tagala, a work that must have been popular since it was reprinted twice. It was based mostly on San Buenaventura's work but de los Santos added words not listed in the former. The best dictionary by any missionary was Fr. Juan Jose de Noceda and Fr. Pedro de San Lucar's Vocabulario de la Lengua Tagala, published in Manila in 1754. So popular had the work become that a second edition was put out in Valladolid, Spain, in 1832, but copies of this rare edition did not reach the Philippines because the ship bringing the copies was wrecked. A third edition was put out in Manila in 1860. This great work was a cooperative endeavor, not the work of two or three persons; it was edited by Fr. Noceda who checked the entries in meaning and pronunciation with knowledgeable ladinos or natives well versed in Tagalog and Spanish. After his death, Fr. San Lucar continued his work. It may be said that this dictionary is the only dictionary of any Philippine language which is the result of the efforts of many people who labored for more than thirty years. After Noceda and San Lucar, the dictionaries published, with the exception of the work of Pedro Serrano Laktaw, are all based on the former. In recent years, Jose Villa Panganiban put out his Diksiyunaryo Tesauro Pilipino-Ingles (1972). The author also prepared a short Diksiyunaryong Pilipino-English (1970) which is an improvement over Serrano Laktaw's in the sense that it includes words derived from English.

The Institute of National Language before the last war published the Tagalog-English Vocabulary, a work I prepared. Dr. Cecilio Lopez, then Executive Secretary of the Institute, edited it for printing. In 1966, the Institute put out another dictionary, the Talahuluganang Pilipino-Ingles, prepared by Jose Villa Panganiban. A special dictionary, E. Arsenio Manuel's A Lexicographic Study of Tayabas Tagalog of Quezon Province was published in 1971. The wealth of the Pilipino language has not been fully explored in spite of these works probably because no foundation, least of all the government, has ever shown any interest in lexicography.

In or about 1950, I proposed to the then Director of the Institute of National Language that a comprehensive dictionary of Pilipino be prepared by the office. It was my plan, as Chief of the Research and Translation Division of the office, to send groups of trained men and women to all the Tagalog provinces in order to study and write down all words used in those places, including variations in the meaning and pronunciation. The dictionary I envisioned would include etymology, shades of meaning, synonyms, usage, idiomatic expressions, and examples in phrases or sentences to clarify the exact meaning or meanings of words. Everybody praised the plan but nobody did something to make it a reality. The usual excuse that the government had no money to spend on such a worthy project was unanswerable. Having failed in my mission, my next move was to choose one or two of my men in the Institute to collaborate with me in the preparation of such a dictionary. I knew it would be difficult and time consuming, for a dictionary, I believed then as I believe now, must be a cooperative undertaking, the work not of one man or of a few men but of hundreds and perhaps thousands of men and women in all walks of life, including the gangster whose cant forms a colorful part of any living language. I looked around me and studied the staff of the Research and Translation Division of the Institute and finally chose Vito C. Santos not because he was the son of the famous Tagalista and literary man, Lope K. Santos, but because he was a serious, hardworking man with plenty of common sense and a deep interest in the dictionary I had in mind. Since the Institute could not finance such an undertaking, Mr. Santos and I agreed to work together on it privately. I outlined the project and Mr. Santos made some suggestions which I readily accepted. Hardly had we made the agreement when President Ramon Magsaysay detailed me to the Philippine Information Agency. This was in 1955. In June 1958, the Department of History, University of the Philippines, took me into its fold. My teaching chores, research projects, and above all, my enervating and exasperating administrative work as Chairman of the Department made me realize that I would not be able to work on the projected dictionary. And so I told Mr. Santos to go it alone, with the assurance, however, that he could rely on me for any help he might need.

Mr. Santos, with the enthusiasm and energy of a medieval monk, worked incessantly, in sickness and in health, and over the years he accumulated such a wealth of materials that astounded me. When he showed me the thousands of pages of typewritten entries, I could hardly believe my eyes. The present Pilipino-English Dictionary is truly a one-man work, a massive testimonial to Mr. Santos' lexicographic ability, industry, and patience. His work reminds me of the three lexicographers of the English language who did a one-man job of compiling dictionaries: Samuel Johnson of England, Noah Webster of the United States, and the contemporary scholar Eric Partridge, a New Zealander turned British. Jose Villa Panganiban's Diksiyunaryo Tesauro, supposed to be his masterpiece, pales into insignificance before Mr. Santos' massive dictionary, which in many places corrects the errors and inadequacies of the former.

As a one-man work, the present dictionary has no pretensions to completeness or to infallibility. No dictionary is ever complete, for language grows almost daily, and any dictionary becomes dated soon after its completion. But of all existing dictionaries in Pilipino, the present work is the best and less incomplete. It divides all entries into syllables, indicates stresses, and, to a certain extent, includes etymology, more particularly if words are of Spanish and English origin. Owing to certain limitations, Mr. Santos has not indicated the etymologies of entries from other languages. This is the work of an etymologist, who is a competent linguist and linguistic scholar.

I have gone over the page proofs of this important work of Mr. Santos and, after comparison with other dictionaries in Pilipino, I came to realize that it is a significant and towering contribution to Philippine lexicography. Mr. Santos is also a writer, which explains why his definitions are more precise than those found in other dictionaries, for a writer instinctively knows the usage, the shades of meaning, and the idiomatic expressions which the average Pilipino linguistic scholar does not know. It is common knowledge that most Pilipino linguistic scholars do not know how to write in Pilipino. They know the mechanics of the language but are ignorant of its literary and artistic qualities.

With the publication of Mr. Santos' Pilipino-English Dictionary, the foreigners who may have the curiosity to inquire into the wealth of the Pilipino language, and the Filipinos themselves who may want to know and understand words they have never heard before, will be the principal beneficiaries, for the present work, incomplete though it is, reflects not only the vocabulary of the older generation of Filipinos, but also the vocabulary and nuances of the present generation whose contribution to this work consists in the use of American words of current and very recent usage. These new additions from the American language are not necessarily permanent, but their inclusion in this dictionary is a recognition by lexicographer Santos that they are part of contemporary linguistic behavior. Their permanent inclusion in the Pilipino lexicography will depend on circumstances we cannot completely account for the moment.

It is interesting to note, in passing, that Mr. Santos' father, Lope K. Santos, was the "Father of Pilipino Grammar," for he single-handedly prepared the official grammar of the national language, which has been made the basis of all grammar textbooks used today in the schools and colleges throughout the Philippines. Mr. Vito C. Santos, on the other hand, single-handedly prepared the present dictionary which, I venture to speculate, will be the basis of other people's "dictionaries," especially those intended for schools and colleges. Were he alive today, Lope K. Santos would look at his son with paternal envy and pride — envy because his grammar looks puny beside his son's massive lexicography, and pride because he is his son.

The father deserved his son, and the son his father.

PREFACE

Second Printing

This revised edition and second printing of the FIRST VICASSAN'S PILIPINO-ENGLISH DICTIONARY has been made necessary due to the widespread acceptance by users that its initial printing of 5,000 copies was not sufficient to meet its increasing demand.

But like most books in their first edition, the FIRST VICASSAN'S PILIPINO-ENGLISH DICTIONARY is not free of errors, mostly typographical errors, and a few missing and misplaced pages in some copies of the book due to mistakes in the folding and gathering of signatures. These, however, have all been corrected in this revised edition, and the jacket and cover of the book have been replaced with more durable ones. Nevertheless, should anyone find other errors or defects, it would be greatly appreciated if the author is informed about them, for he firmly believes that dictionary making should be a cooperative effort and not necessarily a one-man undertaking. Compared to the development of the English Dictionary, the Pilipino Dictionary is still in its infant stage. It took more than 100 years and an estimated over 5,000 dedicated workers before the Modern English Dictionary came out in its present form.

The author wishes to convey his heartfelt appreciation and gratitude to all those who in one way or another have benefited from his book. Incidentally, the book has earned for him two important awards of recognition: Gantimpalang Quezon Sa Panitikan from TANIW (Taliba ng Inang Wika) and Gawad ng Pagkilala from the Institute of National Language. For these, he is truly happy and grateful.

And for the information of users of this Dictionary, VICASSAN is an acronym derived from the name of the author: *VI*TO *CAS*TILLO *SAN*TOS. Henceforth, VICASSAN shall be a permanent imprint of the author's other lexicographic works.

PREFACE

In England, in 1880, "a Bill was actually thrown out of Parliament because a word in it was not in the Dictionary." The dictionary referred hereto was Samuel Johnson's Dictionary of 1755, considered as the pioneering work that "influenced all subsequent lexicographical practice."

If this incident should happen in the Philippines, the possibility of having any bill passed into law would be very remote because thousands of Tagalog or Pilipino words are not yet listed in dictionaries. It is a well-known fact that even the Tagalog-based Pilipino National Language has not as yet produced up to now a dictionary worthy of its name. While it is true that there are some Pilipino bilingual dictionaries with scientific pretensions, they, however, lack accuracy and comprehensiveness.

I mention this matter because of the belief entertained by the majority of our kababayan that now is the time for us to have a truly comprehensive official Pilipino dictionary that can adequately serve our continuously expanding need in all fields of knowledge — in economics, politics, education, sciences, and many other branches of learning.

We have to acknowledge the fact that in the implementation of bilingualism in the school curriculum, as proposed by the Department of Education and Culture, the problem has become evidently more complicated than ever. This is a challenge we have to meet. For to cope with this problem arising from bilingualism, teachers, particularly, should be adequately proficient in both Pilipino and English. Since the materials to be used initially in the implementation of this project will be basically English, the matter of translation will pose a great problem, for we have to admit that the Pilipino vocabulary is still sadly inadequate. And for this, we are only to blame: for all these years we have taken lexicography for granted.

We are, in our own individualistic way, trying to outshine one another, knowingly or unknowingly. I mean, particularly, in the field of dictionary making. Instead of working jointly as a group to achieve our common goal, we choose to work individually and impose on others what we have done. I believe this is selfishness. This in no way will solve our problem. We have to sit down together and work together in order to achieve our common purpose.

I have been accused in some quarters, even by my friends, of being critical about the ways our dictionaries in the Philippines are being prepared. I have, for example, pointed out on many occasions, that root words like batá, batí, baybáy, bayó, biyák, buká, bukás, dukot, dugtóng, langóy, lipád, lingón, and thousands of others, are not verbs, as labelled in many Tagalog-English dictionaries written by known and not too known Pilipino authors. It is important to remember that, grammatically, Tagalog or Pilipino has no root verbs, except in some instances when they are used in the imperative. Being an agglutinative language, Tagalog verbs are formed by affixation. Even loan words can be formed into verbs in the same manner. This is perhaps a peculiarity that other languages do not have. Let us take, for example, the English word taxi and the Spanish libro. From taxi (spelled taksi in Pilipino), it is possible to form itaksi, ipagtaksi, ipataksi, nakataksi, nagtataksi, pagtataksi, pagtaksihín, etc.; and from the Spanish libro we can form isalibró, libruhín, maglibró, magsalibró, maglilibró, palibro, palibruhán, etc., notwithstanding the nominal and adjectival forms that may be derived from them.

A lexicographer, as a disseminator of information with regards to meanings, spelling, syllabication, etymologies, etc. of words, has an important role and responsibility in the study of a language. A knowledgeable lexicographer is, naturally, an asset; but an unreliable one only adds confusion in the learning of a language, for every wrong information that he makes is passed on from one person to another. Here is a typical example I have in mind, which I quote: "... In Tagalog, a major language of the Philippines, the word pí:lit means 'effort.' A morpheme -um-, meaning 'one who did (such-and-such)' may be added within pí:lit, making pumí:lit, 'one who made an effort or compelled.' Sú:lat is 'writing,' sumú:lat 'one who wrote.' A morpheme inserted in this way is known as an 'infix.'"

The excerpt above was taken verbatim from an article entitled Morphology and Syntax, written by Carleton T. Hodge, published in LINGUISTICS, a publication of the Voice of America, United States Information Agency, Washington, D.C. According to the author of the article, -um- is a morpheme, meaning "one who did (such-and-such)" and when added to pilit as an infix, it becomes pumilit, "one who made an effort or compelled." Following the same pattern, sumulat, according to him, means "one who wrote." This, I would venture to say, is a clear example of misinformation which the eminent author might have taken from one of what Professor Agoncillo aptly called "dictionaries of the streets," or else, he has gotten his meanings from the context of the phrases ang pumilit and ang sumulat. UM, as a meaningful unit in Tagalog, is used in the formation of verbs in the present and past forms. It may be used as a prefix, as in umalís (to leave or depart), and as an infix, in lumalâ (to grow worse). It is wrong, therefore, to say pumilit as "one who made an effort or compelled," and sumulat as "one who wrote," for they are not nouns but verbs.

Hopefully, having the interest of lexicography foremost in my mind, I have embarked, almost single-handedly, on a campaign to create a certain climate of friendly rivalry, not only among dictionary authors but also among publishers as well, to make them more aware of their responsibilities as dictionary makers. In England and in the United States, in the middle of the last century, "the war of the dictionaries was reflected in the temperament of lexicographers and in the rudimentary business ethics of publishers. Every device of advertisement and every stratagem of high-powered salesmanship were used by the latter to drive away each other off the market. Unsavory as this war appears in retrospect, it certainly helped to force rapid improvement of the dictionaries that these publishers controlled."

With the publication in 1965 of the English-Tagalog Dictionary of Fr. Leo J. English, a Redemptorist priest from Australia, a new climate in the field of lexicography has become evident. The first thing we noticed is the change in the negative attitude of local publishers to put out bigger and much improved dictionaries. Encouraged by the initial success of Fr. English' Dictionary, it is almost certain that in no time these publishers would lift dictionary making in the Philippines into a new "realm of big business," which I hope would in turn be beneficial to the interest of lexicography. It is expected that because of the competitive nature of the enterprise they would create, these publishers would be more careful in the selection of dictionaries they would publish. Similarly, this would make authors less careless and more aware of their responsibilities.

The preparation of a comprehensive Pilipino-English Dictionary, or any comprehensive dictionary for that matter, is not as easy as some people think. I consider it preposterous for an author to claim that he has made a comprehensive dictionary. Considering the size and the magnitude of the disciplines it embraces, it is humanly impossible for an individual author to do it by himself alone. Dictionary-making requires not only know-how and patience; it also requires dedication. Considered in the Philippines as the most unlucrative outlet of authors in the field of writing, dictionary-making involves a long, tedious, continuing effort that sometimes causes the early death of the author before his work is completed. It is not surprising, therefore, that the publication of Cooper's Thesaurus of 1565, the first great classical dictionary, was delayed five years, because his wife burned the first manuscript of his masterpiece for fear that too much of lexicography would kill her husband.

Dictionary-making in the Philippines is always taken for granted. Here, a lexicographer is virtually a typist, researcher, writer, copyreader, editor, proofreader, etc., all rolled into one. Oftentimes, he is the agent or salesman of his own work. No wonder lexicography in the Philippines is still in a primitive state of affair.

The present work has been prepared to fill the urgent need for a more adequate Pilipino-English Dictionary than any previously published. Aware of the fact that completeness in lexicography is only an ideal, the author has tried to include as many entries as possible, taking into consideration the more desirable qualities of selectivity, adequacy, and utility.

The work on the project started in 1958 soon after the author's retirement from the Institute of National Language. From there on, the first phase of the work, devoted primarily to the collection of materials, carding, and arranging them alphabetically, continued intermittently until 1966. It was only in the early part of 1967 that actual work on the manuscript was begun, but even then, it was often interrupted by the pressure of some other work that the author had to attend to. It was not until 1969 that the work on it had been more or less continuous, the author having been encouraged by a publisher who, as a friend interested in seeing it printed, even offered to publish it as soon it was finished. For obvious reasons the plan did not materialize.

The first draft, consisting of only over 2,200 pages, typed double-spaced on 8-1/2" by 13" bond paper, was finished about the middle of 1972. There were no synonyms, antonyms, etymology and comparisons. Originally, the principal entries consisted mainly of roots and common word bases, while derivatives, compound words, and phrases were entered as run-on entries under their respective roots and bases. But this arrangement, according to some well-meaning friends would not be ideal for foreigners and non-Tagalog users who may not be able to readily recognize or trace the roots of even common derivatives. This prompted the author to change not only the alphabetical arrangement of the entries, but also added thousands of new entries, synonyms, antonyms, etymologies, and comparisons. Now, no run-on entries are given — only main entries, arranged in a single alphabetical list — in order to make it easier for the users to find the word or words they are after. For example, pag-ibig can be found under letter P and not under the root ibig; malakí under M and not under lakí; magandá under M and not under gandá; etc. As revised, the manuscript contains over 6,100 pages on 8-1/2" by 11" bond paper, with over 68,000 main entries.

The entries of this Dictionary were taken from several Tagalog and Pilipino dictionaries, from vernacular magazines and other periodicals and, from informants. The selection of the entries, being the sole responsibility of the author, includes coined words, especially those which have gained or are beginning to gain currency. The list also includes borrowings from local dialects and from foreign languages, especially from Malay, Spanish, English, and Chinese. As a result, this dictionary contains more entries than any comparable Pilipino-English Dictionary to date.

In order to obtain the maximum benefit from this work, the users are requested to read Some of the Salient Features of this Dictionary on the following pages.

V. C. S.

SOME OF THE SALIENT FEATURES OF THIS DICTIONARY

I. Entries

(a) Arrangement of Entries

All entries in this Dictionary are listed strictly following the Pilipino alphabetical system. They are all set in large, boldface type.

No run-on entries are given — only main entries — in order to facilitate the location of a word or words, especially by non-Pilipino users. For example, pag-ibig is entered under P and not under the root ibig. This is particularly helpful to those who cannot readily recognize or trace the roots of even common derivatives.

(b) Syllabication and Pronunciation

All entries are divided into syllables, a new innovation not yet utilized in any Tagalog or Pilipino dictionary at present. This is important to writers, typists, typesetters and linotypists who often make mistakes in dividing words especially at the ends of lines. It is not uncommon, especially to proofreaders, to see such errors committed again and again. AKOMPANYA, for example, is syllabicated ak-om-pa-nya instead of a-kom-pan-ya.

Stresses and accents are indicated as guides to pronunciation. If an entry has a variant pronunciation, this is also indicated in the syllabication or just following it.

(c) Variants

Where an entry has a variant or variants in spelling, this is usually indicated immediately following the syllabication:

abyerta (ab-yer-ta), var. abiyerta, I. adj. (Sp. abierta) . . .

Variants are also listed as separate entries with or without definitions for the purpose of cross references:

abiyerta (a-bi-yer-ta): var. of abyerta, which see.

II. Parts of Speech

All solid and hyphenated entries are provided with part-of-speech labels. Where an entry has two or more parts of speech, these are indicated by Roman numerals, the first following the syllabication or after an indicated variant, if there is any; the second and succeeding parts of speech start separately at the beginning of the following line, preceded with a dash (—) and followed by the corresponding Roman numerals and the part-of-speech labels. See abyerta.

All part-of-speech labels appear in abbreviated form and in light italic type.

adj. (adjective)

adv. (adverb)

aux. v. (auxiliary verb)

conj. (conjunction)

interj. (interjection)

n. (noun)

prep. (preposition)

pron. (pronoun)

III. Etymology

The etymologies of Tagalog entries, whether roots or derivatives, have been deliberately omitted, but those of loan words are usually indicated, following the part-of-speech label. See abyerta.

A loan-word entry, if spelled in the same way as the original, is usually labelled with the abbreviation of the language from which it is derived: adelanto (a-de-lan-to), n. (Sp.) . . . . ; but if the word is spelled differently, the original spelling is given, together with the language label of origin: abesedaryo (a-be-se-dar-yo), n. (Sp. abecedario) . . . .

To save space, the etymological label is not indicated when a particular entry is a combination of a foreign word and a Tagalog affix or affixes: abogaduhin (a-bo-ga-du-hin, v. . . . .

IV. Definitions and Numbering of Meanings

Each entry is given a meaning or meanings. If the meaning or meanings of an entry cannot be translated individually with a single English word, or if such a word is not readily available to the author, said meaning or meanings are defined in his own words. See pasma.

Meanings are numbered consecutively under any given part of speech in Arabic numerals. Numbering is started anew for each succeeding parts of speech.

V. Synonyms, antonyms, comparisons, etc.

Synonyms, antonyms, comparisons, etc. are indicated (Syn.), (Ant.), (Cf.), etc. respectively, usually following each meaning definition. Where a synonym, antonym, or confer is applicable to two or more meanings of a word, it is usually given at the end of the last meaning, with the notation "(for senses 1 and 2, 2-4, 2 and 4, etc.)," or "(for both n. and adj.)," etc.. as the case may be.

VI. Usage and Illustrative Examples

A usage label usually precedes a given definition. See aberasyón.

Slang, colloquialism, provincialism, and the like, are indicated (Sl.), (Colloq.), (Prov.), etc. Likewise, technical, scientific and academic usages are similarly indicated: (Med.) for medicine or medical, (Bot.) for botany, (Gram.) for grammar, (Ling.) for linguistics, etc.

Generally, usage illustrative examples are not supplied, except in some instances where the clarification of the shades of meanings of a word has become necessary.

VII. Names of Plants and Animals

Pilipino names of plants and animals, esp. trees and fishes, are entered in this Dictionary, usually with their scientific names included parenthetically in the definitions in English.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I am indeed very thankful for, and greatly elated by, the compliment and recognition of my work by my friend, Professor Teodoro A. Agoncillo, who says this Dictionary is a one-man work and a towering contribution to Philippine lexicography. To acknowledge this as true without mentioning other persons who have helped me in the realization of this project, makes me feel dishonest and ungrateful. For this reason, I consider it my duty to express my sincere thanks and debt of gratitude to the following persons:

To Fr. Leo J. English who gave me the rare opportunity to work with him for over six years in the preparation of his English-Tagalog Dictionary, thus helping me to acquire more experience; to Professor Teodoro A. Agoncillo who not only wrote the Introduction of this Dictionary but also was my constant and untiring adviser during the entire preparation of this project; to Atty. Ponciano P. Pineda, Director of the Institute of National Language, for writing the Foreword and for his encouraging advice and comments; to Dr. Buenaventura S. Medina, Jr., former Editor of the defunct Philippines Free Press (Sa Wikang Pilipino), who, perhaps in recognition of my little knowledge of lexicography, allowed me to run a column for almost five years in the said magazine; to Mr. Vedasto G. Suarez, Assistant Secretary, Department of Education and Culture, who not only showed personal interest in the value of the project but also gave me advice and encouragement which inspired me to finish the work; to Mr. Agustin F. Umali, Ichthyologist, not only for his important advice and comments but also for lending me two reference books, one on local names of Philippine fishes and the other on local names of fishing gears; to Miss Fulgencia B. Ayuda, publisher and owner of the Advocate Book Supply Co., not only for encouraging me to finish the first draft of this Dictionary but also for giving me several reams of typewriting paper.

Other persons who deserve special mention for helping me in one way or another are Mr. Pablo R. Glorioso. Mr. Fernando L. Samonte, Mr. Pedro B. Ayuda, former Director Pacifico N. Aprieto of the University of the Philippines Press; Mr. Alberto Florentino, Mr. Engracio L. Valmonte, Dr. Ligaya D. Perez, Celestino M. Vega, and the late Alejandro G. Abadilla.

And last but not least, my very special thanks to my wife, Mrs. Luningning E. Santos, who not only helped me in checking the manuscript during her spare time, but also shared with me all the travails and pains I encountered in the preparation of this Dictionary from the very beginning up to the end; and to my children, Araceli, Panahon, Anino and Silahis, who are my constant source of inspiration and encouragement. Anino made the layout design of the jacket of this book.

THE AUTHOR

THE PILIPINO ALPHABET

(Abakada)

The orthographic system used in this Dictionary is the standard spelling based on the Pilipino alphabet, called Abakada, as promulgated in the Balarila ng Wikang Pambansa, the Pilipino National Language Grammar.

The Pilipino alphabet is composed of only twenty Romanized letters as you will notice in the following:

A a	(as a in combat)	N n	(na; Sp. ene)
B b	(ba; Sp. be)	NG ng	(nga)
K k	(ka)	O o	(as o in solo)
D d	(da; Sp. de)	P p	(pa; Sp. pe)
E e	(as e in best)	R r	(ra; Sp. ere)
G g	(ga; Sp. he)	S s	(sa; Sp. ese)
H h	(ha; Sp. atse)	T t	(ta; Sp. te)
I i	(as i in hit)	U u	(as u in buffalo)
L l	(la; Sp. ele)	W w	(wa)
M m	(ma; Sp. eme)	Y y	(ya)
